

MORE PROTESTS IN CONGRESS AGAINST GOVERNMENT BILL

Fresh Deluge of Letters and Telegrams Against The Reorganization Bill

TO RESUME THE DEBATE

One Telegraph Company Recruits Operators From Numerous Cities

By William S. Neal
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, April 1—(INS)—A fresh deluge of letters and telegrams attacking the Administration's Government Reorganization Bill, descended upon Congress today as the House, racked with dissension, prepared to resume debate on the measure.

While friends of the measure cried "organized propaganda," its foes declared the protests against the bill, which would give the President wide powers to reorganize governmental agencies, have smashed all records. One telegraph company brought in operators from Philadelphia, Baltimore, Huntington, W. Va., and Richmond, Va., while another called in extra help. The House post office was virtually swamped with mail.

In the face of this deluge, Administration leaders confidently announced they will close debate during the day, open the bill to amendment and drive it to final passage by Saturday night.

Rep. O'Connor (D.) of New York, denying that "organized propaganda" was responsible for the protests, said he had discovered but one form letter being circulated. This, he said, was in Rye, New York.

"My letters come from people I know, Democrats, who are aroused over this legislation which has spread fear throughout the country," said O'Connor.

Says Highway Through Here May Be Rebuilt

Bristol Rotarians were addressed by a member of the Pennsylvania State Highway Department at their regular meeting at the Elks' Home yesterday afternoon. Browning Holcomb, the speaker, spoke on several different phases of the State highway program.

Planting of trees, shrubs and vines along the State's highways for beautification purposes, were discussed by Holcomb. He pointed out that besides the beautification of the highways the trees and shrubs also acted against soil erosion and thus make the highways safer.

Pennsylvania has 30,000 miles of highways, according to Holcomb, and this compares favorably with any other state. The program of planting along the highways was begun in 1929 and each year since then the program has been expanded, and increased appropriations have been made. Holcomb stated that honeysuckle is one of the main plants that is being used along the highways of the State today.

Although not giving the specific details, Holcomb told the Club that Route 13, which runs through Bristol, will be improved in the near future. Holcomb stated that it may be built to match the super-highway through Langhorne.

Frank Voit, president, was the chairman. Following the address Holcomb answered numerous questions for the members. He advised that when planting trees or shrubs along the highway on private property that the planter take into consideration expansion of the highway that may run along the property.

Harry Burbank, member of the Mount Holly Rotary Club was a guest at the meeting yesterday. Stanford Runyan, local member, was welcomed back after spending some time in Florida.

TO DISCONTINUE FERRIES

PHILADELPHIA, April 1—(INS)—The Reading Railroad's ferry lines across the Delaware from Philadelphia to Camden, N. J., will be closed down April 30, officials of the road announced today. Decline in patronage since opening of the Delaware River Bridge was given as the reason for discontinuing the 50-year-old ferries.

Must Not Nail Signs To Poles or On Trees

Police today warned against the nailing of posters or other signs upon poles and trees within the borough limits. Recently there have been several instances of placards being posted on not only the trees, but the poles of the Bell Telephone and Phila. Electric companies, as well.

Chief Jones today called attention to the danger of driving nails into the poles to hold the posters. "This is dangerous to the linemen," said Chief Jones. "In climbing the poles the linemen come into contact with the nails and tacks with the danger of injury to themselves." It is also stated that there have been instances of workmen touching nails which have been driven into poles, being severely shocked.

The Tree Commission of Bristol Borough Council states emphatically that posters must not be attached to trees and that prosecutions will be instituted if the offenders are found.

JAMES SAYS PENNA. MUST AID INDUSTRY

Candidate Sees High Taxes and Red Tape Causing Flight of Industry

APPEALS FOR RECOVERY

UNIONTOWN, Apr. 1—Declaring that Pennsylvania's biggest task is the restoration of business through assistance of the State Government, Superior Court Judge Arthur H. James, delivered another of his campaign speeches here last night. Judge James is candidate for Republican nomination as governor.

He carried that message to 1000 Republicans of Fayette county, who, with 150,000 other inhabitants, have been suffering from economic distress as a result of a virtual shut-down in the operations of the soft coal industry during the last seven months.

As he appealed for industrial recovery, Judge James also struck at centralization of government at Harrisburg, a course followed by the Earle Administration, adding that if he occupied the gubernatorial chair he would function as a "part of a whole, not a whole show."

James also took occasion to administer another verbal drubbing to his Republican opponent, the 72-year-old Gifford Pinchot.

Informed that Pinchot, in a radio address, had declared he would discuss Judge James' record next week, the Plymouth man challenged the ex-Governor to match records with him.

"I have nothing to hide," he said. "If that gentleman can find any skeletons of mine, let him bring them out. There is nothing I've done of which I am ashamed."

In fighting mood, he then said he didn't like to talk about Pinchot, but wouldn't let the forester go unanswered.

"I'll let the people of Pennsylvania know what he really stands for," he emphasized. "He talks about harmony in public, while all the time his campaign office in Philadelphia circulates malicious propaganda."

The jurist came here from Pittsburgh and made more than eight stops.

STREAMLINED PRANKS FOR APRIL 1ST

NEW YORK, April 1st—(INS)—They laughed when he sat down under the piano and well they might for this was April Fools' Day and somebody had swiped the stool.

"But that's an old gag—no punch," said Bemis V. Whirlpool, inventor of the whirlpool forced laugh system. "What we need for April Fools' Day are some streamlined pranks."

"For instance, the day is young, but I have already sneaked into the Y. W. C. A. and switched all the hot and cold water faucets in the showers. Right now, I am preparing to pick 25 numbers at random in the telephone book, call them and tell whoever answers that I'm coming to take the radio out if the installments aren't paid."

"Later, I am going to get some bones in a butcher shop, wrap 'em in a newspaper with a murder confession and drop 'em in Times Square. I'll begin to warm up about then."

"If I can get into 'I'd Rather Be Right' tonight, I'll stay just long enough to stand up and denounce it as pro-capitalist, then I'll hurry over to 'Pins and Needles' and denounce it as anti-capitalist."

* Bemis was asked: How about some new gags for the home and office?

"In the office you can connect the water cooler with the steam pipes," he said. "I don't think that's been done before. I have a dandy for the home—you take the screws out of the hinges on the dining room door and then you ring the dinner bell."

Before we left, we gave Bemis the number of the Zoo and told him that Mr. Lyon wanted to hear from him.

I don't recognize the name but I give him a ring as soon as I get some of these April Fool plans rolling," said Bemis.

He was taken into the house by his father, John, a wealthy retired farmer, but died a short time later from internal injuries.

BLOSSOMS TO ATTRACT THOUSANDS TO PRESERVE

Bowman's Hill Section is Brilliant With Spring Flowering Plants

IS A FINE ATTRACTION

NEW HOPE, Apr. 1—The Bowman's Hill State Wild Flower Preserve, it is expected, will be visited by thousands of flower lovers, with the arrival of Spring and many blossoms.

The preserve was established for the purpose of commemorating in nature's way the valor of the patriots who camped in these hills during the most discouraging period of the American Revolution.

Throughout the preserve, which is located in Washington Crossing Park are to be found numerous trails, including the Pidcock Trail, the Mary K. Parry Trail and the Edgar T. Wherry trail. Other trails to be found on the preserve are the marigold, trillium, azalea, bluebell, gentian, evergreen and laurel trails.

Most of the species growing here are perennials which survive year after year. In order that the entire State may do equal homage and that no species that may have grown here at the time of the famous encampment may be missed, species representing the flora of the State will be established here.

Many of the plants along these trails have been brought to this place at great expense and trouble from remote sections of the State. Many have been donated as memorials to nature lovers who have died. Garden clubs, women's clubs, Girl Scouts and a number of patriotic organizations, have been taking an active interest in supplying the preserve with flowers and plants.

Miss Anna K. Bewley, Forest Grove, will serve as guide through the preserve for clubs or other groups.

TO DIRECT ACQUITTALS FOR 2 BUCKS COUNTAINS

One Bristol Man and One From Yardley To Be Freed Due to Lack of Evidence

IN LIQUOR RING TRIAL

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 1—A Bristol man and a former chief of Yardley police are among the 16 defendants for whom acquittals will be directed for lack of sufficient evidence against them in the bootleg alcohol ring trial in the United States District Court, here.

Those for whom acquittals will be directed include Alfredo Dallanza, Bristol, and Thomas South, former chief of Yardley police.

When trial in the case resumed this morning in Philadelphia, jurymen were directed by Judge Albert B. Maris to acquit 16 out of the 31 defendants. Trial of the other 15 continued. Of the 91 indicted in the four-State conspiracy in which the Government charges it was defrauded of millions in alcohol taxes, 60 had pleaded guilty or offered no defense before the trial began.

In overruling motions for directed verdicts for the remaining 15 defendants, Judge Maris yesterday referred to one of them, Benjamin Fogel, as "unquestionably the center of the conspiracy, if the jury should find there was a general conspiracy in which all the defendants were engaged."

"Fogel was the one," the Judge said, "who was buying up all the product of the illicit stills and distributing it to the other defendants."

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1938, by The Baltimore Sun)

Perhaps He Didn't Know

Washington, March 31.

IF Mr. Roosevelt occupied a less exalted office than President of the United States a harsher and more accurate way might be found to describe his open gloating over the passage by the Senate of the much emulated reorganization bill, than to say that it seems both immature and premature.

THE FACT is that the President's comments, as reported from Warm Springs, shed a not very pleasant light upon the man and justify the assertion, so often made recently, that he is more concerned these days in winning over his opponents

Through the efforts of Stuart C. Plummer, the Boy Scout Troop, No. 1, of Bristol, sponsored by Bristol Presbyterian Church, enjoyed a trip to the United States naval base at Lakehurst, N. J., Saturday afternoon. Transportation was furnished by H. A. Pettit, Sr., Herbert Pettit, Jr., Maurice Updike, Harold Hanson, Charles Weik and Horace Harper. Twenty-four of the Scouts enjoyed the trip.

Upon arrival at Lakehurst the boys and men were taken on a tour of the hangars. A guide was provided to show the interesting parts of the dirigible "Los Angeles," the only ship of its kind possessed by the United States. The guests were informed of the long and successful record of this great ship, which has been retired from flying service, and is now used entirely as a laboratory, and as a means of instruction for the young officers of the Naval Air Corps. The other ships housed at Lakehurst were also shown to the party and explained to them.

The guides, during the course of the afternoon gave a graphic description of the last arrival of the "Hindenburg," and her ultimate destruction by fire. The entire tour was most interesting and instructive.

Bucks County Is Well Represented at Session

At the meeting of the Southeast District of the Pennsylvania Congress of Parents and Teachers, held as a part of Schoolmen's Week at the University of Pennsylvania yesterday, Bucks Countians were well represented. Several hundred parents and teachers attended each of the sessions.

Mrs. Ralph M. Fox, Morrisville, president of the Southeast District group, acted as the chairman at the two sessions yesterday, introducing a number of outstanding speakers. Nine Bucks county associations were represented.

Mrs. Fox presented Dr. John E. Kiefer, educational secretary of the Philadelphia Health Council and Tuberculosis Society, who gave an interesting and instructive talk on the need and importance of teaching the value of Social Hygiene and to teach the public "How to keep from getting sick." His talk was followed by an interesting and enlightening reel of movies on certain diseases that cause serious problems.

J. T. S. Shaul, state chairman, continued the interesting program with his talk on "The Value of School Relationships." He emphasized the need of co-operation with the home in blotting out dreaded diseases, and illustrated his address with definite plans and channels for help.

At the afternoon session a very crowded room and hall were held spellbound by the prominent educator, Dr. Francis Harvey Green, headmaster of Pennington School for Boys, as he addressed the group on the subject, "Home Community Relations."

"Home," said Dr. Green, "is atmosphere and not a geographical location. The home must be of the right sort and have proper relations to the community. Folks and spirit make a home. The community is the place where persons have a spirit of 'togetherness.' The more that people will get together, the happier everybody in the community will be."

"Everybody's need should be everybody's deed," the speaker stated. He also interwove poems and read several selections illustrating his theme, Home Community Relations.

J. Frank Fanst, president of the State Education Association, read an interesting paper on School Community Relations. He emphasized the need of co-operation between the home, the school and the church. He said there must be team work in order to be successful relations. He also said that the community owes the school Good Will.

INGENUITY SHOWN BY STUDENTS IN SPRING DISPLAYS

Bath Street School is Transformed By Attractive Projects

AN ESKIMO VILLAGE

Many Visitors Register As They Call to See The Handiwork

Exceptionally proud, and rightfully so, are students of Bath street school, over the decorations in the four downstairs rooms. During the past week many parents, school directors, other teachers, and friends have paid visits to the building, and have admired the handiwork of the boys and girls.

Upon entering the first grade room which is in charge of Miss Sparks, an Eskimo village attracts attention. With lime used for snow, Eskimo dolls fashioned by the pupils have their homes attractively arranged. There are to be found igloos of cotton, cakes of ice moulded from other materials and sprinkled with lime, and Eskimo dogs and their sledges are in the scene. The Eskimo dolls measure seven or eight inches in height, and each has a suit of brown material with parka of fur. The dolls were stuffed by the students. As a fitting backdrop there is an Arctic scene, and to one side is a large totem pole in gray paint.

Another attraction in this room is a barnyard scene with the barn and tool shed in their rightful places, with figures of clay representing human beings and animals.

On the windows Spring scenes have been painted with water colors by the teacher. Perched on gaily blossoming branches are bluebirds, and there also appear blossoms in shades of red, yellow, blue, on branches of green and brown.

A "library" building, termed "Bath Street Library" has been built from orange crates, and this is of sufficient size to accommodate any pupils in the room. The interior has been papered, and the exterior painted in white. Window boxes have bright paper flowers "blooming" in them; and from the top of the structure an American flag waves. Chairs have been placed inside of the "library."

The second grade in charge of Miss Lerman has featured Dutch scenes, with wind-mills, figures of Dutch girls and boys, and tulips formed of paper. A canal runs through the center of the scene in the Netherlands.

Borders on one of the black-boards show Dutch children and their pets, including ducks and dogs, and some of the boys are proudly displaying their boats which they sail on Holland's canals. On one wall there is depicted an Indian war dance, with the paper figures superimposed on a suitable background.

Miss Violet Hilgendorf and her first and second grade students also have an elaborate display. One unique arrangement is that of a farm, where onions, cabbage, tiny trees and flowers are actually growing. A duck pond is made of glass, and there are toy chickens in the chicken yard, and tiny animals in the pasture lands. This complete farm has a barn, piles of hay, implements and machinery; as well as all types of animals to be found on a well-equipped farm. Alongside of this exhibit are to be found pasted on cards pictures of animals and products found on farms. In this manner the boys and girls are learning all about life in the country. Dutch scenes have not been forgotten by these pupils either.

The third grade is included in the exhibit, this particular roomful of pupils being taught by Miss Maude Connor. At the front of the room there are drawn in colors pictures of those people who are ever watchful of the welfare of children and adults alike. These include: Policeman, milkman, baker, merchant, farmer, mailman, dentist, nurse, fruit vendor, garbage collector, doctor, teacher, principal, janitor, mother, father, etc.

These third grade pupils built a high fence for their Dutch scene, using orange crates. This is neatly painted, and behind it there are windmills, Dutch boys and girls made of paper.

Pictured on the black-board is the "Road to Good Citizenship," with the children having it impressed upon them that they should help others, be polite, kind, and thoughtful.

Easter suggestions are painted on the windows.

Each of the rooms has a guest book, and in them numerous visitors have recorded their names.

FRIDAY, APRIL 1, 1938

YE COMPLEAT LAWNER

The April winds may blow and we may have frosts, and what will the robins and crocuses do then, poor things? But it can't and won't last, and soon your lawn and garden will demand your strict attention, and will repay you with the glories of nature and all the colors of the rainbow, forgetting winter as if it had never been.

With garden time just around the corner, we take this opportunity to apprise you of a new way to make a lawn, invented by a fellow of the Royal Horticultural Society of London. No more, says he, need you bend your aching back with spade and hoe and rake and soil spreader and seeds over a recalcitrant bit of ground, only to have the wind and the birds and rains sweep your labors away. All you need to do is to paper your lawn as you would paper a wall, and presto, you have a lovely carpet of green. Here is how:

The ground to be sown is leveled and the surface covered with fine soil; over this you spread the paper sheets. The grass seed is incorporated in the sheets of soft white paper, which decomposes when kept moist, and the seed digs in and germinates in from seven to ten days.

The advantages claimed for the new method, besides protection from birds and wind, are the regular spacing and room for growth, even depth of sowing, maximum germination, and curved edges, around flower beds, for instance, can be cut to shape from the seed sheets with scissors. There are many varieties of seeds, to suit soil and purpose, and all the lawn maker of the future will have to say is "Fifty sheets of Mixture No. 6, please," and proceed to paper the ground.

The new idea is not common practice in America as yet, but we are willing to wait and learn.

WAR WILL DESTROY THEM

The Garbo fan expects to be haunted by the recollection of some of her finer screen performances but it is not necessary to be an admirer or even to approve of pilgrimages to Mussoliniland to be haunted by a remark she dropped to an interviewer the other day. "She said quite simply that she had not seen a great deal of the world and the beauty that is in it, and that she wished to be before that beauty had been destroyed."

Though there is less in this immediate tragedy, the point of view belongs with the despair of the intellectual flower of Vienna who have preferred suicide to living when all that makes life worthwhile is lost. Ravello, where Garbo is staying, is above Amalfi on the Gulf of Sorrento, and is surely one of the loveliest places in Italy and all the world. Once a considerable town, it is now a village which is itself in the nature of a museum, with a fine campanile on its old cathedral.

In short, Ravello is the sort of place that an energetic pilot with a modern bomber could utterly demolish in 15 minutes. With its back against the hills above the Mediterranean, it is a canoe and as fragile. A flying vandal could dispose of it as easily as he could pulverize a priceless miniature with a sledge.

The millions everywhere in the world, who have sensibilities and a sensitivity to what is beautiful and fine and so defenseless in the face of the threat that now hangs over Europe like a pall, will echo the thought and fear of the Swedish girl who wanted to see a little of it before it had been reduced to dust.

quasi-judicial and legislative boards—but toward the end, it seemed to become a matter of overwhelming personal importance for him to pass what was left.

WHY? There are three obvious reasons—first, because he is eager for more power—and this bill gives him a great deal more power—more power than he or any other President should have, second, because it would give him the opportunity to abolish two vital instruments of the Government, which have been thorns in his flesh and more or less critical. One of these is the office of the Comptroller General and the other the Civil Service Commission. From both there have come in the past caustic comments upon Administration politics and expenditures; third, because the passage of his own bill seemed a way to humiliate, or, at least, deride of a triumph, Senator Harry Byrd, of Virginia, whom Mr. Roosevelt really hates and who was the pioneer in the reorganization movement.

IN BRIEF, Mr. Roosevelt's motives in the tremendous and quite unusual fight he has made for this bill are not the highest. At a time when one would think his every thought would be concentrated upon finding means to revive the sick industries of the country and end a dangerous depression, he strains himself to the limit over a measure which is not wanted by the country which creates bad feeling, further splits his party and serves no good purpose. Even if it were free from the grave objections made to it, there would still be no justification for the kind of campaign the President has made to get it through.

IT HAS already been charged that so many promises were made by the President's aides, that agencies in which particular Senators were interested would not be disturbed if the bill passed, that unless he repudiates these assurances there will be little he can do with the power he asks when he gets it. In other words, in their anxiety to get votes, so many promissory notes were put out by Administration agents that if they are redeemed no real reorganization can be effected.

IN THE FACE of the promises, appeals and pressure resorted to in the last ten days, the President's declaration that the vote shows the Senate cannot be "purchased" and his denunciation of the telegrams that poured in as "organized misrepresentation" comes close to being the most remarkable utterance he has made in a long time. If he were not President it would be proper to characterize it as an unmitigated piece of effrontery. No wonder his shocked secretary touched him on the shoulder to be sure that "purchased" was the word he wanted to use. With the knowledge he must have of what was done by his lieutenants, a man who would make that sort of statement about the opposition would seem capable of saying almost anything. Or perhaps he did not know and has no sense of the realities. That is the kindest way of construing it. But, if this "victory" so affects him, another such will be ruinous, indeed.

"Love I Dare Not" by ALLENE CORLISS

SYNOPSIS

Alec Graham, 36, is a successful playwright, and Gina Warren, at 31 has matched his success in her own field, portrait painting. Ten years ago, they had been in love, but the demands of their careers had been such that finally they had drifted away from the idea of marriage and into an almost casual friendship. Dining with Barry Bedard, art critic, an old friend, Gina confesses her regret that she and Alec have allowed ambition to become more important than love. Believing that Alec shares her feeling, she promises Barry to try to renew the former romance. But that same evening, Gina's young cousin, Caroline Hoyt, arrives to stay with Gina. She wants to study dramatics. Alec, interested in spite of himself by Caroline's personality and talent undertakes to help her. He places her with a dramatic coach, Rose Martell and takes her to see all the important plays. Alec does not realize he is in love with Caroline. Then, Gina gets an out-of-town assignment to do a portrait. Alec sees her off. Noticing how tired and thin she has grown, he tells her she must soon take a long vacation—in Bermuda or perhaps in the south of France. He remembers, as the train pulls out, how many times they two had planned to take just such a holiday together. He thought now if he suggested it, Gina would have laughed and said, "Don't be an idiot . . . we were finished with that part of our lives years ago."

CHAPTER IX

It was still relatively early when he arrived back at the apartment hotel where he was living that fall, so he decided to call Caroline on the telephone and assure her that Gina had got off all right.

When he got her on the wire, her voice sounded surprisingly small and forlorn. Suspecting that she was finding the apartment unexpectedly lonely with Gina gone, he said, "See here, it's still early, why don't you grab a cab and come along up here? We'll go out somewhere and buy ourselves a sandwich and I'll see you get home safely."

"When Caroline hesitated, he said, 'You've never seen my place and I thought it might amuse you, but if you'd rather, I can go down there.'"

"Oh, no," said Caroline hastily, "I'll come up. I'd love to, really."

She arrived half an hour later. She was wearing a new dress, or at least one that he had never seen before, and she had done something to her hair. He wasn't sure he liked her hair so brushed and disciplined looking, but her dress was lovely. It was a simple brown velvet affair with a gold belt at its slender waist and dull gold clips accenting its high neckline. He thought, continuing to consider her dispassionately, that she already knew more about clothes than Gina ever would . . . and that it was a pity she hadn't more of Gina's dark, caressed beauty. . . .

"Walk across the room to the piano," he commanded, "then come back and sit down in that wing chair and cross your knees."

She obeyed him, moving easily, utterly without embarrassment. But her eyes, seeking his when she had finished, were anxious, eager for approbation.

"Well?"

Alec nodded. "Not perfect. But better than last week. Much better. How are you getting on with Rose?"

Caroline slumped back in the wing chair, grinned gently. "She is a fiend. I ache all over. Every bone in my body. Those breathing exercises she makes me do are torture. Alec. She stands over me like a truck driver and pulls the breath right up from my toes. Today she made me go up and down stairs a dozen times with a pile of books on my head. Next week I start taking French lessons and tap-dancing."

Alec grinned back at her. "That's the stuff. That's why Rose turns out actresses so fast. She's better than all the dramatic schools in the country. She'll have you ready to voice was as light as a whisper. "Alec, why did you kiss me like that?"

He laughed briefly, his pulses steady beneath the absurdness of her question. "Because I wanted to more than I have wanted to do anything for a long time, I suppose. Did you mind?"

"No, I don't suppose I did. Only—"

"Only what, angel?"

"Only I supposed that you . . . that is, well what about you and Gina, Alec?"

He said, "Gina," his eyes almost as astonished as hers had been. "So that's what's worrying you? Well, don't let it. Years ago, Gina and I were in love with each other. It didn't last . . . for a long time now

"Alec, why did you kiss me like that?"

talk business to a producer by Christmas. That is, if you can take it, if you can stand the grind."

Caroline jumped up suddenly and walked across the room. She stood close to him and put her hands on his arms. Her eyes were blazing and her cheeks were white with emotion. "I can stand it. You wait and see. . . Oh, Alec. . . If I could . . . by Christmas. . ."

He took her hands away from his arms and held them closely. His pulses were leaping with a dark excitement which he had not experienced for years, not since that long ago springtime when he had first known Gina and been in love with her. . . .

He thought, "If I had known I was going to want to make love to this child, I would never have asked her to come here like this." He thought, "I probably shouldn't do this. . . and he put his arms around her and kissed her.

Her eyes, when he released her, were wide and astonished. Her

"Shall California belong to the wheat-growers, who bring food-crops from the soil each year, or to the hydraulic miners, whose terrific streams of water tear away the hillsides and ruin the adjacent farming lands?"

In the 1870's that was the burning question of the day. Men fought about it. Many were killed. Bitter hatreds were engendered. The peace of the whole Golden State was disturbed.

This situation forms the basis of "Gold Is Where You Find It," a magnificent motion picture which had its first local showing yesterday at the Grand Theatre. It is a Warner Bros.-Cosmopolitan production, made with the newest Technicolor process—a great, sweeping drama that held audiences spellbound.

By far the larger part of the action is outdoors, in nature's own tints. Warners had an outdoor picture in Technicolor last year called "God's Country and the Woman," which achieved a tremendous success throughout the world. "Gold Is Where You Find It" is much superior—which is indeed high praise.

BRISTOL

Drama, romance and comedy, blended into a fast-moving story and highlighted by the picturesque spectacle of life at the U. S. Naval Academy, mark "Annapolis Salute," with James Ellison, Marsha Hunt, Harry Carey and Van Heflin in the leading roles, which opened yesterday at the Bristol Theatre.

Dealing with a long-standing feud between Ellison and Heflin as two midshipmen, the story presents Ellison as the son of a petty officer in the navy, played by Harry Carey, whose burning ambition is to see his boy graduate from Annapolis. But between the young man's hectic romance with the pretty sister of one of his classmates, and the efforts of his rival and enemy to get him into trouble, the father's fond hopes are constantly in danger of frustration.

When Ellison decides to resign from the Academy in order to marry the girl, Marsha Hunt, and she learns what a blow it will be to his father, she courageously sacrifices her own happiness by promptly dismissing the attentions of the young cadet. In an effort to learn her motive, Ellison leaves the grounds of the Academy without permission and calls on her, during which time another girl is injured in an accident which is unjustly blamed on the boy. How he finally manages to clear his name without involving his sweetheart, how he wins the girl while at the same time fulfilling his father's fervent desire, and how the girl successfully patches up the differences between the feuding midshipmen, all provide dramatic moments and exciting action.

Chamber of Commerce To Advertise Co. Seat

Reynolds favors a "shopping news" which will carry a spotlight feature, interesting news stories and advertising, and will be distributed once a month. He recommended sending out through the mails about 7,000 copies over an area of about 12 or 15 miles from Doylestown.

Robert L. Clymer, who favors advertising Doylestown by inserting clever leaflets in envelopes containing checks or orders sent out by the County Seat business men, said the chamber of commerce should boost Doylestown and thereby boost individual business. "I think we should work with the real estate men, and advertise Doylestown. If we can build up Doylestown we are helping everybody. We should have small, three or four page circulars which we can put into our business correspondence. The booklets should be placed in the hotels, attorneys' offices and other places in Doylestown."

Charles A. Rowe, who explained he also agreed with Mr. Clymer's idea of advertising Doylestown through an attractive, informative folder, said: "The problem of parking should be taken up and fought through because it is one of Doylestown's most vital questions and interests everyone."

President Reynolds, speaking on a movement to discourage fake advertising through church booklets, plays and other benefits, said that county seat business men lose from $50 to $250 a year simply because they can not afford to refuse to advertise in church, charity or play booklets. "It has become a racket and the largest share of the money does not go to the church or charity, but to the promoter of the scheme," said Mr. Reynolds, who asked that the chamber of commerce take some action on this form of advertising, which should be done through the chamber of commerce.

Councilman George F. Smith, who stated he agreed with Mr. Clymer, said what a chamber of commerce wants to do is sell Doylestown and the surrounding section. He said a booklet would publicize the hotels, stores, schools, places of interest and other features of the town.

Rudolph O. Hein and Frank W. Ely both stated they favor the booklet from of advertising Doylestown.

Dr. John N. Rich, who said the function of any chamber of commerce is "to put the town on the map," explained often he is asked by strangers, who are motoring through Doylestown questions such as "Where is the library?" "Do we have a hospital?" "Where are the eating places?" "Where is the Mercer Museum?" and other queries. He favored the booklet method, which would give information about churches, schools, industries, clubs, historical museums and a brief history of Doylestown.

Rudolph Hein advocated advertising the chamber of commerce once a month in a local newspaper and buying 4,000 copies and sending them to various residents of the county who are not subscribers of the newspaper.

W. W. Rutherford said he favors the booklet method because the first thing any chamber of commerce does when asked about the character of a town is to present a booklet giving the necessary information.

The president stated that Bruce Sprowles is designing a seal, and that members will have the opportunity to adopt a sticker or emblem at the next meeting.

Burgess Dr. John J. Sweeney, who thanked the business men for their co-operation in assisting in the correction of parking evils in Doylestown explained the stand Doylestown Borough Council has taken on the question of unpaid water rents. "We have reached the stage in Doylestown where if the delinquent water rents are not collected and paid, it will be necessary to increase the taxes. Borough council is doing it for the people's own good. Council has taken this step and I am going to see to it that the ordinance is enforced," said Dr. Sweeney.

Burgess Sweeney paid a tribute to the councilmen who strive day in and day out to improve Doylestown by fighting for the citizens in order to make it a better town. "The councilmen are fighting your fight and it is an organization like this that can back Council. If we fall down on this ordinance, we will fall down on others," said Burgess Sweeney.

The chamber of commerce went on record as favoring the action taken by Council in shutting off water supplies of citizens who are delinquent. Pointing out that the two hour parking ordinance will be put into effect as soon as the signs arrive and can be placed along the street, Burgess Sweeney said it will effect the area in State between Pine and Clinton streets on the north side of the street, and Main between Ashland and Broad streets.

The importance of having attractive signs at the approaches to Doylestown was discussed, but nothing definite was decided owing to the immediate plans of the Doylestown Centennial Committee.

President Reynolds explained that an effort will be made to have all members properly grouped with respect to business classifications, including the type of business and merchandise handled.

An effort will be made to have a membership of at least 100 by the next meeting which will be Tuesday, April 19th.

Refreshments were served.

Two-Day Sessions Of W. I. L. Being Planned

When a recent Saturday Evening Post article said, "A name to conjure with... young, vivacious, well-turned out and absolutely uncompromising. A highly effective thorn in the side of military minded government officials and Congressmen and of lackadaisical peace executives. She comes very near to deserving the single handed credit for having inspired and in the end, forced the Nye investigation of the munitions industry in 1936."

Round table discussion on legislation, education and public relations will be held during the two days. The past year's work will be reviewed and plans projected for the coming year in the light of current international situations. Resolutions will be drawn up for presentation to the annual conference of the national section to be held in Minneapolis April 30 to May 3.

The Women's International League has sections in 25 countries and groups in 29 others. Its international president until her death was Jane Addams.

The W. I. L., its representatives explain, stands for a peace much more than the absence of war or violence, a positive principle in human relations, to be found only when there is free co-operation for the common good, a peace deriving its strength from the recognition of human solidarity; for freedom of the individual to contribute to decisions and to express different opinions, and achievement of social change by peaceful and democratic methods in a free society.

in the county. At each point he was given a hearty welcome.

"The time is here to return to the old belief, to restore the Republican principles to control in Harrisburg and to make a concerted drive for the restoration of business," Judge James said at a party rally in the county courthouse.

"Among the great traditions there used to be one which was a fundamental principle of the Republican Party; that business should be encouraged, that industry should be helped by the Government—not strangled with red tape nor smothered with taxation.

"Much of Pennsylvania's success in the past has been due to the following of that principle in this State. We have seen in the last three years what happens when a contrary course is followed."

Governmental assistance to industry, the jurist emphasized, would result in "uncounted benefits to those now idle, to the working people upon whom so large a part of the burdens fall, to farmers, to the State as a whole."

If elected, he promised to conduct the office in accordance with the American tradition—Independence for the Executive, legislative and judicial branches of the State government—without any attempt to "centre in the hands of any one office all the reins of Government in the State."

Running the Capitol at Harrisburg is a man-sized job now," he added, "and any serious attempt to clean up the mess there and to restore industry in this State will make it still more of a job."

"I want you to know I will follow the American principle in which I believe with all my heart, and, if elected, I shall never forget I am part of a whole, not the whole show. The courts will continue with their functions, the Representatives and the State Senators whom you people elected and sent to Harrisburg will not be asked, but told, to do the things which you expect and which the Constitution requires of them."

Prior to his appearance at the party rally, the jurist made a radio address to the voters of the county, in which he denounced the new type of "tyrannicalisms which are already being given some trial in this country."

Assailing the Roosevelt Administration for its attempt to "control" business during the depression years, instead of assisting it, Judge James characterized the Democratic remedy as "novel medicine."

"We are finding, however, that the medicine is worse than the disease, and we are coming to realize that none of the nostrums we have been trying are going to work, and that we ourselves must fight our own way back to economic and political health," he said.

Asserting that he had no panaceas to offer, the jurist declared, however, he had a point of view, acquired through his early struggles from a breaker boy in the mines to his rise in State affairs, which would be of assistance in pulling industry in the State out of the mud.

Judge James had two pleasant experiences when he entered this county.

As he arrived at the county line, among his welcome was R. K. Wright, of Mazonville, president of the Redstone township school district who knew the jurist as a boy in Plymouth. They also worked together in the mines at Nottingham Colliery.

At Mazonville, where the school board declared a holiday for students in honor of Judge James, he was greeted by Mrs. Mary Lloyd, 90, who lived in Plymouth during his boyhood days.

More than 500 were on hand when the jurist arrived in Mazonville. Two bands, the high school and Bessemer School Musical groups, entertained.

Escorting him through the county, which included stops at Brownsville, Fayette City and Connelville, were George C. Brown, his campaign manager in Fayette county; former Public Service Commissioner S. Ray Shelby, former Sheriff John Q. Adams, former Register of Wills Frank Ruse and former Judge Davis W. Henderson. Also in the party were Mrs. Ella Adams, Republican State committeewoman, and Miss Ruth Bechtel, vice-chairman of the Young Republicans.

TROUT FISHING SEASON WILL OPEN APRIL 15TH

The 1938 trout fishing season opens on April 15 and present indications, according to Commissioner of Fisheries C. A. French, are that interest in trout fishing has already touched a new high this year.

Mild spring weather and the appearance of the Fish Commission's new tank trucks, carrying thousands of legal sized trout to suitable waters, in many sections of the Commonwealth have combined to make the coming trout season the most looked-forward-to on the part of the anglers in recent years, he said.

Anglers who have assisted in stocking broad girthed and beautifully colored trout of the three species, brook, brown and rainbow, say that never have such active and well conditioned fish been released in Pennsylvania. The Fish Commission expects that at least one million trout of catchable size will have been placed in the waters by April 15. While many of these trout range in size from six to eight inches, thousands of speckled beauties exceeding 10 inches and up to 18 inches in length, are being released.

In such prime condition are these fish that within 15 minutes of the time they are planted, reports indicate, they start taking food from the surface of the stream. When released in pools and eddies they dart like swift silvery shadows into the current, "standing" against the flow of the water, heads pointed upstream, every swift movement of their fins indicating prime condition for testing the light tackle of the fishermen.

To give these stocked fish a break, fish wardens and other state officers are keeping a "weather eye" on stocked waters to detect any attempt at violation. In all fairness to the great majority of law abiding fishermen and to protect the stocked fish so that all may share in the first day's sport, fishermen who "jump the gun," taking trout before the season opening, will be prosecuted to the limit.

Brains Behind the Bees

by BURNLEY

Last year Wise Will McKechie gained something like a "miracle manager" reputation for his work with the despised Boston Bees.

Now, nobody doubts that William is a foxy guy and a good pilot, but a lot of baseball men think that the real power behind Boston's 1937 rise was none other than Catcher Al Lopez.

The hawk-beaked Alphonse is credited with being the man who developed Jim Turner and Lou Fette into mound stars.

Turner and Fette, as you no doubt recall, were the freshman pitching sensations of last year, and both are over thirty years old. Lopez, a brainy boy behind the platter, taught these aged recruits the various batters' weaknesses, and inspired them with enthusiasm and confidence.

Al isn't much of a hitter—at least he didn't do very well with the stick in 1937—but then the Bees were a team of "hitless wonders" last season. One of Casey Stengel's big problems as McKechie's successor is to develop more slugging power in his line-up. Curious Casey, who is always optimistic, thinks the light-hitting Vince DiMaggio may show some of Brother Joe's swatting ability during the coming campaign. Vince is going to wear glasses at the plate, which may or may not help him to hit those curve-balls.

"Safety" Is Theme of New Richfield Ad. Campaign

In an effort to help stem the constantly rising tide of automobile accidents, the Richfield Oil Corporation of New York is devoting its entire advertising campaign for the Spring and Summer of 1938 to the cause of greater highway safety. In every advertisement, motorists learn that the two most important factors in avoiding accidents are "brakes that stop quickly, to keep you out of trouble, and gasoline that starts quickly to get you out of trouble." Illustrations are based on the experiences of actual motorists, showing the reader what to be careful of when driving. The first of these object lessons makes its appearance this month.

An important part of the campaign is a safety book, containing "ten commandments of safe-and-save driving," which will be available, free, to all motorists at Richfield stations. The book contains safety rules sponsored by ten of the nation's leading safety officials, reducing to a minimum the book for safe driving. The value of the book lies in the fact that these rules are offered by men of experience and authority on highway regulations.

To further aid the cause of safety, Richfield has offered to put at the disposal of any safety authorities wishing to use them, its fleet of sound trucks. These trucks, equipped with powerful loud speaker systems can be employed in safety drives and at congested traffic points.

The Richfield campaign has been in preparation for almost a year with every source possible being tracked down for principles of safe driving. In devoting its advertising to highway safety, the Richfield Oil Corporation of New York joins the growing list of organizations backing the nation-wide movement to save lives and prevent injury from automobile accidents.

WELL CHOSEN FABRIC GIVES SATISFACTION TO WEARER OF DRESS

By Miss Edna Stephany

(Home Economics Representative)

Remember the story of the three little pigs? How one built his house of straw, another of wood, and the third of brick? And how only the one of brick, which took the most thought and care in building, was able to withstand the blowing wolf? There is a good moral to that little tale which might well apply to our modern housewives.

Three little brides wanted to keep their husbands' respect and admiration, so they got together one day and decided to save some cash in the family purse by making their own house-dresses.

The first little housewife found a beautiful piece of cotton material which was just what she wanted. There were no signs or labels on the fabric indicating that it was colorfast to washing and to sunlight nor was there any indication of it having been fully shrunk, but this did not worry her. The color caught her eye and she decided to "Take a chance" on the rest, thinking that "most materials today are colorfast anyway."

At the first wearing she made a real impression on her new husband, but unfortunately something went wrong when the dress was laundered. The beautiful color disappeared into faded streaks and the way that dress fitted the little bride after it had been ironed was sad to behold. It became a dust rag.

The second little bride had read somewhere that a "vat dye" label stamped on the selvage of the material indicated color fastness. She also remembered vaguely that one could get fully shrunk material. In her zeal to find a vat dye product she forgot all about the fully shrunk guarantee and went home with a beautiful piece of vat dyed cotton material for her house-dress.

She enjoyed making the dress and wearing it for her appreciative husband. But she never wore it again after it was washed. It shrank so much that she looked as though she had been poured into it. In fact she almost popped off a button during that next try-on process. Tears were of no avail, but she determined to remember the fully shrunk guarantee when buying material for her next dress.

Now the third housewife was a conscientious soul. Not only did she plan what color of garment would suit her own coloring, but took the new kitchen curtains into consideration. She took time to find a piece of material that was fully guaranteed to be colorfast to both washing and sunlight and that had been fully shrunk. The time taken in making her dress was not wasted because every time it came out of the tub it looked as good as new.

tally will not have forgotten the flood of January, 1937, which, while it did its greatest damage in the states along the Ohio river below Pennsylvania, nevertheless, was responsible for great property losses in the western section of this State before the angry waters rolled on toward the Mississippi.

If we except the great Johnstown flood, where a breaking dam was responsible for the biggest loss of life in the history of floods in America, we find that both the 1936 and 1937 inundations made the heretofore record floods of 1889 pale by comparison. But even though this be so, say the flood experts, the maximum flood heights were far below the theoretical maximum. Greater floods are entirely possible and will probably occur in the future.

During the early period of the State's development, floods caused little property damage because there were few houses and structures located in the areas subject to floods. As the industrial development of the State progressed, factories, homes, highways and railroads were built on the flood plains, so that floods, when they occurred, resulted in much greater financial losses.

Until a few years ago, every major flood resulted in numerous deaths as well as large financial losses. The rapid growth in the communication system, especially the radio, provided a method of warning the people of impending floods, so that today the people in a flood danger zone can be evacuated before the flood waters overflow the land. Much movable property can be removed from the danger zone if the flood warnings are given and heeded in time.

The radio broadcasts and newspaper accounts of flood conditions have done much to educate the public to the necessity for recognizing floods as a grave danger. While it would probably be difficult to prove that floods are becoming more frequent and more serious (although our mediums of public information may sometimes unwittingly picture them so), nevertheless, floods are a constant source of danger and should be treated as such. What has been done, is being done and can be done to control, lessen or prevent them will be discussed in the forthcoming issues of this column.

FINDS LOST CAP

BOSTON, Mass. — (INS) — C. R. Meany, radio operator of the fishing trawler Harvard, lost his jaunty looking yachting cap overboard in a sudden gust of wind. Three months later, the cap, not quite so jaunty looking, was brought up from the ninety fathom level with a net load of fish. The cap was still wearable.

Does home need a "face lifting"?

Sometimes homes, like people, are taken for granted and signs of weariness go unnoticed. Homes, too, need beauty treatments. They come out of them renewed, refreshed, stimulating once more to all who meet them.

Early Spring is the time to plan the "face lifting" of the rooms in which you live. Carefully planned, a little money now can go far. Fortunately, authentic news of the latest, the best designed, the most economical in home furnishings and accessories is printed for you day after day on these pages. National manufacturer and local merchant advertise to help you.

Perhaps slip covers on davenport and wing chair will make faithful but a little weary pieces look like new. Perhaps summer draperies will make your living-room so fresh and gay that you yourself will hardly know it. A new rug may be the prescription that your home needs. A new lamp can light more than a corner—it can shine into the hearts of all who see it. Glassware, a new table, porch furniture, all can enter into your home's face lifting.

Look about your home as if you had never seen it— and follow the advertising on these pages!
